Gizmo strips away computer hassles, offering Gold Coast residents computer help home delivered

Gold Coast, Queensland – 12 September 2007 – Gizmo, the flexible support service created to help Aussies get peak performance out of their computers and digital gear in the home, today launched its on-site services on the Gold Coast.

Gold Coast residents can now enjoy a better relationship with their computers by calling a friendly Gizmotech to their homes to help with services including setting up computers and laptops, PC health checks, cleaning out viruses, installing wireless gear and connecting computers to other independent devices such as mobile phones, gaming consoles and MP3 players.

Gizmo has expanded its telephone assistance and in-home support service to now lend a hand to the people of the Gold Coast, adding to its current Queensland presence in Brisbane.

“Gizmo is excited to help Gold Coast residents bring their digital gadgets to life in their homes. Our Gizmotechs will be able to help locals free up their time by getting their computers and different gadgets working together, creating an easy and fun computing experience for them,” said Brett Chenoweth, Gizmo’s co-founder.

Some of the latest Gizmo service packages include the following:
